Strange Attractor Press is proud to present Strange Attractor Journal Three, the latest in the acclaimed independent anthology series, edited by Mark Pilkington and designed by Alison Hutchinson.

Setting out to explore rarely-charted territories in history, ethnography, art and literature, each edition of Strange Attractor Journal is a beautifully crafted cabinet of curiosities, attracting contributions from a ever-growing secret society of novelists, historians, musicians, scientists, occultists, ventriloquists, artists, anthropologists, psychonauts and others who defy categorisation.

Journal Three takes us from the opium dens of Thirties Paris to a transgender spirit possession festival in modern-day Burma. En route, readers will encounter psychoactive fauna, a Victorian time machine, the occult roots of modern art, the horrors of recto-genesis, the literary kingdom of Redonda, the underground empire of Joseph Williamson, twelfth-century Arabic alchemists, Arthur Koestler's sex poetry, Virgil the Necromancer, Surrealism's lost poet and whole worlds more.

Contributors to this edition are:

Praise for Journals One and Two

'A unique and necessary collection of eccentric scholarship, weird journalism and obsessive research. Nothing else like it' SAJ2, Independent on Sunday 'Best of the Year' 2005.

'A very special organ... triumphantly diverse and choicely illustrated. The chances are very high you will find yourself... strangely attracted.'

Time Out, London on SAJ2

'The essential publication of the year... independent, timeless and altogether splendid.'

Counter Productions on SAJ2
